

Motivate, empower and inspire

Now in its fifth year, the Pharmacy Women's Congress goes from strength-to-strength with a packed program offering something for everyone, and not just women.

Hear how the woman behind The Heat Group, Gillian Franklin, became not only a leader in the industry but also a leader in women's issues in the workplace. The Heat Group said it prides itself on responding to the challenges mothers face in balancing their lifestyle needs with their career; including the need for legislative reforms in the workplace to enable more women to continue to work while raising a family.

Diane Goodwin will host an interactive session on identifying and leveraging off the diversity of your colleagues; recognising behaviour traits and how to manage them in stressful situations.

Jason Brutskins from FRED will help delegate unlock the secrets of their pharmacy IT programs, looking at everything from Excel, spreadsheets to Microsoft Word to keep you organised and on track.

Well-known speaker Frank Sirianni from Medici Capital will take delegates through the issues when considering pharmacy ownership. He will also present a number of case studies.

Sessions will also cover clinical topics such as osteoporosis and ovarian cancer awareness.

The Guild's Jenny Bergin will take delegates through the highly topical and relevant impact of the PBS reforms.

The congress will also showcase the finalists of the National Student Business Plan competition and the overall winner will be announced at the gala dinner.

There will also be numerous optional activities for delegates to explore all the delights Melbourne has to offer and a wide and varied social program.

Full registration is $450 and there are concessional rates for pharmacy assistants, pre-registration pharmacists and students.

The Pharmacy Women's Congress will be held 29-31 August at the Crown Promenade Hotel, in Melbourne's vibrant Southbank entertainment precinct. ■
